HEAT STRESS

After 3 or 4 days of temperatures in the 30s, you may find a bird(s) stretched out on the floor of the cage or aviary and unable to fly away. If a bird becomes too hot it tightens its feathers and holds its wings away from its body and will breathe with its beak open. If it gets too much heat, then it collapses from heat stress.

Quickly pick-up the bird and transfer it to a cooler, but not cold, cage by itself. While you have it in your hand, dip its beak into some water and it may drink. Do not force it to drink or give it drops to the beak. Place it on the floor of the cage and it will continue to lay still. Disturb as little as possible and continue to offer it water every hour.

The sooner you spot a bird suffering from heat stress the better, for if left unattended it will suffer brain damage and die. While it lies on the floor it can be very lightly sprayed with cold water, but not enough to chill or frighten the bird. A little sugar in the water offered may help. Handle the bird as little as possible as the additional stress from handling may cause death.

There is not much else you can do except to remedy why your bird room was so hot. Cooling sprays on the roof, extra shade, a cooling fan, will all help. The next day the bird may be dead or acting as though nothing happened. Cut down on seeds such as oats and the oil seeds until the bird has fully recovered.

WHERE IS OUR SENSE OF RESPONSIBILITY?

As aviculturists we believe we provide adequate care for our birds, that their well-being is the very foundation of our hobby and as Avicultural societies and clubs, we inherit a leadership role and a responsibility to guide those involved towards good and improving practice. It may be time to ask whether we are providing the leadership expected and whether a sense of responsibility is overt and drives our actions.

A recent public event drew demining criticism of what appeared to be gross failure to implement the adopted Code of Practice, citing examples of birds being presented in conditions described as unacceptable. This criticism extends to active lobbying for Governmental intervention on the basis that voluntary regulation simply did not work. This is a risk that we all need to be conscious of and eliminate by consistently demonstrating good animal husbandry.

It does not matter whether we are involved in competitive exhibition, sales, displays or private bird-keeping. As individuals we are all practicing animal husbandry with a responsibility to do it well and as organisations we are responsible for guiding members and striving for community acceptance and good will.

Not everyone in the community supports bird keeping and we ignore views contrary to our own at our peril! Many pressures such as urbanisation, financial difficulties and competing interests threaten the long-term viability of aviculture with sound animal husbandry being the ultimate defence. If we allow a community perception of bad practices that are not in the best interests of the birds we claim to look after we undermine support or tolerance for our hobby.

It is timely for individual bird-keepers and Avicultural organisations in particular to undertake some serious soul searching. Are we sufficiently concerned for animal welfare or have we lost sight of this in pursuit of aesthetics, financial return or other aspects of the hobby? If we believe we are sufficiently concerned for animal welfare what are we doing to actively promote it and advance standards of practice? Are we being sufficiently responsible?

If community pressure or lobbying prompts Government to act, what type of action is most likely? Inevitably, it will be some form of regulation, imposing standards on the basis that they are now necessary – that self-regulation has failed. Do we want to be part of the cause for this type of intervention? Are we willing to allow those around us to make it warranted?

What is it that your club or society should be doing about this?

Nutritional Digestion Aids for Good Health and Wellbeing

TummyRite™

Avian Wellbeing & Health for Maintenance, Breeding and Show

An excellent mixture of nutritional herbs, enzymes, yeasts, prebiotics, amino acids, carotenoids, vitamins and trace minerals for birds of all kinds including breeding birds. Created for the individual aviculture enthusiast. Ideal for maintaining good health and wellbeing of birds and for avian fanciers preparing birds for showing and breeding.

We are looking for potential Club/Bird Society or Commercial Organisations that would be interested in becoming distributors for our TummyRite™ range of products.
